COURSE PROJECT

The foundation for this course is the mandatory course project. The project requires participants to focus on identifying a real-world public safety problem or ineffective/inefficient process and developing a plan to change or improve it. There will be an emphasis on choosing a project that serves to benefit the community the agency serves. After choosing the topic, the participant must develop a new process, procedure, or approach that will be presented to their respective Agency Head for consideration.

WHAT TO EXPECT

Each participant will receive a course pre-packet that will provide a detailed course description, as well as the preparation required to successfully complete this course. Each course will be overseen by a NJSACOP Course Coordinator who will serve to assist each participant with their course requirements or needs and will be available both during and after class.

COURSE CREDITS

This course has been reviewed and approved for three (3) college credits through Fairleigh Dickinson University, within the two following academic programs:

- Bachelors of Arts in Individualized Sciences – The student will be awarded three credits at no cost once enrolled within any of the FDU programs.
- Masters of Administrative Sciences – The student will be required to attend a one day supplemental leadership program with a FDU Professor as directed by FDU Administration. Once the student successfully completes this program, they will be awarded three credits at no cost once enrolled within any of the FDU programs.
- The credits are subject to FDU limitations to the amount of no-cost credits the student has received from other sources.

FRONT LINE SUPERVISION PROGRAM INSTRUCTIONAL TEAM

Through a partnership with Lexipol, the NJSACOP has assembled a highly qualified and professional core group of training instructors. Our Training Team offers a unique blend of training expertise combined with practical, hands-on management and leadership experience in supporting a wide array of training needs for all levels of law enforcement. Collectively, our team members offer many decades of training experience as police officers, assistant university professors, adjunct professors, and military leaders. Collectively, our team has authored, co-authored, or edited numerous articles on a variety of law enforcement issues to dissertations on adult learning styles and determinants of effectiveness of leader performance. Our team members are enthusiastic about this training product and stand ready to deliver a program that exceeds your expectations.
