October 12th has many different meanings in the Spanish-speaking world. For some people it is El Día de Colón, the day Christopher Columbus arrived in the Americas. For some, it is el Día de la Hispanidad, a day to celebrate one's connection with all other Spanish-speaking people, regardless of their country. And for others, it is el Día de la Raza, a day when indigenous people come together as a community and celebrate their heritage. Other Spanish speakers celebrate their mixed heritage of indigenous, African, and European cultures. We will kick off this national holiday by honoring our roots through an interactive educational discussion with guest speakers, alumni, and light refreshments.
