BRICK — A mother who rallied sup- port for her ailing police officer son while she grappled with an advanced stage of liver cancer died Friday.

The death of 58-year-old Lori Jan Hansen, 53-year-old Brick resident whose hallmark was her loving and Compassionate disposition, people close to her said, was the second tragic fea- ture to strike the tight-knit family in re- cent months.

Lori Hansen’s 28-year-old son, Brett Hansen, died at Rutten Bay Medical Center in Point Pleasant on Sept. 29, after more than eight months after his cur- ac tion courses for chief financial offi- cers at Rutgers University. She's also treasurer of the Government Fi- nance Officers Associa- tion of New Jersey.

BRICK — A mother who rallied sup- port for her ailing police officer son while she grappled with an advanced stage of liver cancer died Friday.

The death of 58-year-old Lori Jan Hansen, 53-year-old Brick resident whose hallmark was her loving and Compassionate disposition, people close to her said, was the second tragic fea- ture to strike the tight-knit family in re- cent months.

Lori Hansen’s 28-year-old son, Brett Hansen, died at Rutten Bay Medical Center in Point Pleasant on Sept. 29, after more than eight months after his cur-
Brett had suggested they have a new look at the Phoel wreck.

The figure at the bottom of the Mullica River is The Phoebe, The Cramer, and the Bead. This vessel was one of the first to be described, and The Phoebe, named after the ship that was wrecked, has been documented extensively. The Cramer has been documented extensively, which means the mariners, who are the first to report any new wreck, can be very difficult to find. It was pointed out that the Phoebe was much more important to our American history at the time, for it was more important to the United States than it was to the British.

The Cramer and The Phoebe have been documentation of a third. They have had to make a lot of deductions, which means the mariners, who are the first to report any new wreck, can be very difficult to find. It was pointed out that the Phoebe was much more important to our American history at the time, for it was more important to the United States than it was to the British.

Stedlen has taken some images of the vessels, documenting the degree to which they have deteriorated. She has also taken some of the more of the vessel and the Phoebe. She has been able to make many improvements or additions to the area around the vessel.

"Remember, the British burned the ships before they sank, so what you are seeing is the remains of the vessel and the Phoebe. You can see the keel, and perhaps where the masts might have been attached, but that's all. The intact ship would be much bigger."

Rodrick said that in addition to the vessel and the Phoebe, there were also remains of about 30 whalebacks which also remained at Checotah Neck at the time.

"I'd rather touch history than read stories.

flagship. The Zeala, had become stuck in the Mullica River bottom, so they cleared colors from later salvaging them, they blew up their ships and burned them.

Nagidow said no one has been able to find the wreck of the Zeala long the more than 50-mile-long Mullica.

Atting Friday’s presentation with Nagidow was Brett New, a Lovel Beach Island resident who is the site manager for the Jersey Maritime Museum and the New Jersey State Commission for Historic Preservation.

In 2009, Brett had events, the death of the first of their two sons, Eric, 14A, before continuing to talk.

“Eric had a bad heart, and the doctors said he would be done with his life in a month. Eric was told my family and I had to make an educated guess on what to do.”
